You don’t have to be a parent to positively impact a child.

Whether you are a parent, a grandparent, a neighbor, a coach, a teacher, or simply a friend, when you spend time making a child feel valued, you are helping to build his or her confidence. You are preparing the child for a lifetime of success, and also helping to build their resilience for when life can be difficult.

We can all keep children safe.

You can create a better future for the children in your community through simple tasks, such as:

- Helping a friend, neighbor, or relative with childcare, especially during holidays or schools breaks
- Mentoring a child
- Helping develop parenting resources at your local library or school
- Helping meet material needs of families
- Donating money needed for children's activity fees or club memberships
- Helping caregivers access services for children
You have the power to strengthen families.
